

Ralph Mills

Curriculum Vitae, June 2017

My professional background includes some 20 years working as a peripatetic field archaeologist, mostly on rescue projects, which included supervising the excavation and recording of challenging and complex threatened heritage ranging from Hadrian's Wall to Dover's Roman forts, during which I acquired extensive experience and advanced skills in field archaeology. Latterly I have focused on a more academic approach to historical archaeology, obtaining both an MA and PhD. My interwoven commercial career has complemented my archaeological and academic interests by involving research, communication, writing, editing, IT skills, desktop publishing public relations, marketing and photography.

Skills and experience:

- Archaeology: supervision of first-class excavation under challenging rescue conditions. Whole site and feature recording (site plans, feature recording, surveying, finds illustration and photography). The safe and effective leadership and motivation of large teams of volunteers and professionals. A natural communicator, responsibility for public engagement; guided tours, open days, displays, lectures, posters and leaflets.
- Writing: communicating lucidly and accurately with all audiences and all print media, specialising in presenting complex technical information in a reader-friendly manner that attracts and retains readers. Successful interaction across continents with stakeholders, colleagues, clients and contacts from the shop floor to CEOs and top civil servants.
- Editing: Turning the raw materials of communication into attractive, meaningful end-products. Copy and sub-editing of everything from children's books to scientific journals.
- IT: significant experience of desktop publishing, web site creation, office programs and image manipulation software.
- Volunteer management: Having been involved in volunteering since my teens, I am a natural, committed leader, able to enthuse and motivate others to achieve goals safely and effectively.
